A PLEASING MODERN OCCASIONAL TABLE

Classicism and modernism are not more than a stone's throw from one another these days. Sometimes, too, of the Biedermeier influence is evident in this honey colored maple occasional table. Honey colored maple trimmed with black is characteristic of furniture of the Biedermeier period. (The Biedermeier furniture is the German and Austrian interpretation of the Directoire and Early Empire periods). The round top of the table is supported by three fluted columns which also sustain a convenient lower shelf. Simple and just as smart as it can be is this extremely pleasing table with its excellent lines. The modern arm chair with the high back is a comfortable, decorative and amusing note for an odd corner. It may be upholstered in either a handblocked linen or one of the soft and lovely Rodier fabrics. Neither of the pieces shown above is so definitely period as it will not harmonize with pieces of furniture of other periods.

AN ATTIC BEDROOM HAS A BUILT IN DRESSING ROOM

Attic bedrooms with their sloping roofs have a charm all their own. Particularly is this so when one's ingenuity comes to the fore and utilizes every available inch of space in an interesting manner. In the sketch illustrated above is shown what might be called a built-in dressing table. This might be either a finished piece of furniture, that is, a chest of drawers, or merely a table top with perhaps a single drawer. The drapery conceals any unfinished state that might exist and gives a soft touch to the group. The voile glass curtains with their pleasant criss-cross line give a good background to the table and serve decoratively at the window, too. The valance which hangs from the ceiling just across the alcove is an answering note to the dressing-table drapery for it completes the entire picture. Old-fashioned Godey prints hung in pairs on either side of the table provide a welcome touch of color. A feature not to be overlooked is considering a dressing table of this type is the excellent light for one might exist and gives a soft touch to the group.

STATE PICNICS

MISSOURI President Sam Sealeman and his fellow officers warn at the Missourians that this is the last call for the annual October picnic of the Missouri State Society of Southern California in Sycamore Grove Park, Los Angeles, all day Saturday, October 27th, 1928.

President Sealeman will arrange for county registers and headbands, and treasurer Charles Hubbard will offer a beautiful silk souvenir badge to each one. Merle Hancock, one of the finest soloists and song leaders in the city will lead the community singing which will include the old melodies and popular patriotic songs. The Lucille McArthur Orchestra will supply many numbers. Among prominent Missourians who will be on the program are Hon. Charles J. Golden, Dr. C. M. Aker, Judge H. Parker Wood. While this will be the last outdoor reunion there will be a jolly indoor social the third Tuesday evening of each month in the Moose Hall at 1024 S. Grand avenue, with a popular program, presentation of prizes, refreshments and dancing, under the auspices of the Los Angeles County Association where all from the great Show Me State are welcomed.

SOCIAL DANCE Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of the district will assemble Saturday night for one of their jolly socials in the I. O. O. F. Hall on Redondo boulevard. Dancing and various amusements will be the program with refreshments at the close of the evening.

"Everlasting Materials"

Precedent for its design drawn from both Britain and Normandy this pleasant cottage is refreshingly different from the usual run of small houses. Its rough, rustic exterior appearance is obtained by the use of burned bricks laid up in an irregular manner with the joints uncraked and whitewashed. To add to the rustic effect of the walls, the roofing shingles were laid in slightly irregular wavy lines and not with the usual machine-like precision.

Thoroughly modern in appointments and convenience, the interior of the cottage has been delightfully treated to bring the rustic effect inside. The interior walls are finished in rough plaster tinted in light colors. The living room ceiling is heavily beamed, as may be seen by the dotted lines on the living room plan.

Entering the house from the front one goes through a small vestibule directly into a large living room which has a fireplace at one end. The dining room and kitchen are on this level. Two bedrooms and a bath are also on the first floor, but are on a slightly higher level than the living and dining rooms and are reached by a short stairway from the living room. The second floor contains two bedrooms, a bath and a large, well lighted storage closet.

This house was designed by Frank J. Forster, architect.

Actual Demonstrations of Plumbing and Heating Equipment Now

For the past month, F. L. Parks of the Torrance Plumbing Company has been enlarging and remodeling his showroom at 1418 Marcelina street in order to have a complete display of plumbing and heating fixtures to show buyers.

Several types of water heaters, furnaces, plumbing fixtures and heaters have been connected so that actual demonstrations may be given. It is a display that is a credit to Mr. Parks and a service seldom offered outside of the metropolitan centers.

"We want our customers to have the opportunity of actually seeing the merchandise they are buying, on display, just as it will look in their home," said Mr. Parks, "and we will welcome anyone who is contemplating the erection or alteration of buildings to come and visit our showroom."
